2022 ANNUAL REPORT

DEAR FRIENDS

"Alone we can do so little; together we can do so much" is a famous quote by Helen Keller that you've likely heard many times. It's a poignant statement from a strong, accomplished woman who relied on others to be her eyes and ears to the world. None of us walks this journey of life alone, and for more than 10 years now, the M.O. of Share Our Spare (SOS) has been mobilizing people to share, collaborating with providers and connecting communities to resources so that parents know they are not alone.

Through your help and support, and the power of partnerships, we were able to serve the essential needs of nearly 13,000 children and their families in 2022. During the year, we added 11 new permanent partner agencies for a total of 78, along with another 82 "limited" partners - agencies on our waitlist who have access to items in our Sharehouse, with the exception of diapers and wipes. We also completed the first year of our partnership with the Greater Chicago Food Depository, through which we provide diapers to 50 of their high-need food pantry sites in Cook County. Together, we delivered 5.4 million diapers to residents in 2022.

As we've grown, we've also broadened how we reach families. In 2022, we continued supporting the Family Connects Chicago program through our collaboration with EverThrive Illinois and new partnerships with Sinai Chicago and Metropolitan Family Services. Family Connects Chicago, an initiative developed as part of Healthy Chicago 2025, is a nurse home visiting service available to Chicago families with newborns. SOS serves as the essential items provider to the program, and we could not be more excited to do our part.

It's been a tough time for Chicago area families. Rising inflation (diaper costs alone have gone up 30% since the pandemic). Decreasing benefits. A national formula shortage in 2022. Continued gun violence. The struggle for parents - both middle- and low-income - is very real and takes a toll not only on finances, but also on physical and emotional health...and even hope. I am so proud and grateful that SOS can be a resource, relief and source of hope for families across Chicagoland, as they work to protect and provide for their children.

I'm also proud that we are part of a small but mighty group of nonprofits - the Illinois Diaper Bank Coalition - advocating for better for families across the state. Our mission is to work together to address unmet diaper need by getting behind solutions for making diapers more affordable and accessible for all, including legislation currently making its way through the Illinois General Assembly that would provide a monthly diaper stipend for eligible families.

You, our community of donors, volunteers and supporters have enabled SOS to continue to meet the need and work towards a day when all children and families are able to thrive. Our greatest partnership is with the individuals who give so generously of their time and resources because they, too, care about the future of this great city. Since moving into our new Sharehouse in 2021, you've shown up in droves to volunteer, to donate items, to host events that benefit SOS and educate the public, to discuss issues facing families today, and to fill the space with love!

Executive Director

CONNECTEEN AT LURIE CHILDREN'S HOSPITAL

Vanessa Avila is open about her past with her clients. "When I'm vulnerable with them, and they know I've experienced some of the same pain and struggles but come through it all, they begin to believe that things can and will get better. I can be the light now for them that people were for me."

Avila is Parent Educator for the ConnecTeen program at Lurie Children's Hospital of Chicago. Originally intended for pregnant or parenting youth in the Chicago Public Schools system, the program expanded during COVID to serve parents of any age, with children 0-5 years old, who are waiting for home visiting services. "It can take up to three months sometimes for parents to be fully enrolled in these programs, so we are there to help fill in the gap while they wait," she says.

Avila provides parent education classes on a wide range of topics, such as safe sleep and vaccinations, as well as one-on-one support. A trained advocate for victims of domestic violence and sexual assault - and a survivor herself - she is able to counsel families through the healing process.

"Many of these families are refugees who have escaped violence, speak little or no English, and have no resources," she says. "This is where Share Our Spare (SOS) has been so valuable." Among a large caseload, averaging 35 to 60 families each week, Avila says about half are in need of diapers, wipes, clothing - all of the essentials that SOS can provide. She visits the Sharehouse for these items every couple of weeks.

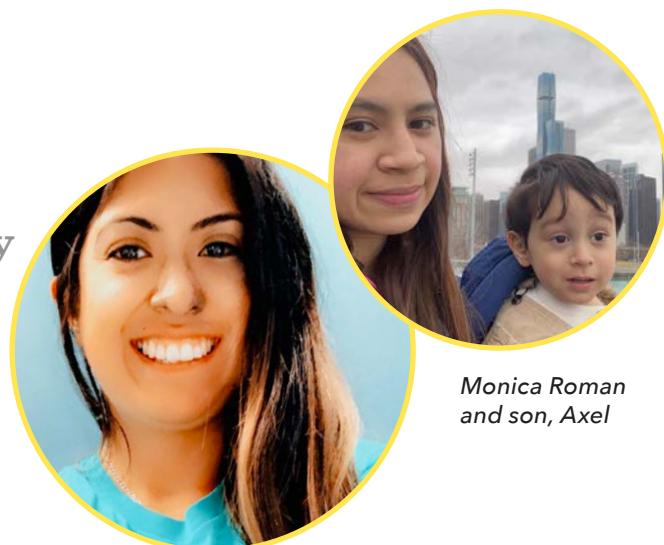

"It can take up to three months sometimes for parents to be fully enrolled in these programs, so we are there to help fill in the gap while they wait." Vanessa Avila

Additionally, the developmental and educational tools that SOS has, including books, playmats for "tummy time" and toys that help develop fine motor skills, have been a gift, she says. "Families are working so hard to secure the basics that they often have little to no resources left for these things."

Monica Roman, who was raised in Mexico and is now raising her 2-year-old son, Axel, in Chicago as a single parent, says that the toys he's received through SOS have helped reinforce his therapy. Diagnosed as developmentally delayed, he receives physical, occupational and speech therapy on a regular basis. "Usually the toys we use in therapy stay with the therapist, but this has allowed us to practice skills development at home," she says.

While waiting for her enrollment into the Children's Home & Aid program to be completed - now into its fourth month - Roman is working on an important milestone with Axel. "He's still breastfeeding, so we're trying to transition him to solids, which will make it easier for me to go back to work," she says, adding that Avila has been a great support through the process.

The workload can be overwhelming and many case workers are leaving the profession, "which is why the wait times are so long for families," says Avila. "But this is what I believe I'm meant to do, and the reward is seeing families come in like a caterpillar and leave like a butterfly."

EXECUTIVE CONSTRUCTION FOUNDATION

"Giving back is in our DNA." If you visit the Executive Construction Foundation's website, that's not only a headline you'll see, but a message coming through loud and clear. The foundation helps 60+ nonprofit organizations annually and, since it was established in 2019 to support the long history of charitable giving by Executive Construction Inc., has donated over 2,000 volunteer hours in the last three years.

The foundation takes efforts several steps further with its annual Adopt-a-Charity Program, in which it targets one nonprofit each year with a blitz of support, from volunteering to raising money and awareness. Share Our Spare (SOS) was its "mark" in 2022. "We're passionate about giving back to organizations that contribute to community wellness and betterment by supporting the most vulnerable, and SOS does that on a large-scale basis," says Erin Fiegel, Vice President, Marketing Director for Executive Construction, a nearly 50-year-old general contractor based in the Chicagoland area.

While the foundation has donated over the years, after attending the SOS Gala and hearing "what a difference they've made to social workers and the families they support," they wanted to be a supporter of the organization, according to Fiegel. "We found SOS doing incredible things, serving as a connection point for so many other organizations and providing the basic needs that so many can't afford...but not a lot of people seemed to know about them. We made a goal to help change that."

During the year, Executive Construction Foundation held a diapers and essentials drive at its annual "Parking Lot Party" for staff and sold chances to "dunk" management for a donation to SOS, invited SOS to a local golf fundraiser event, and organized team members to volunteer in the Sharehouse. The foundation also provided team members to complete some needed installations in the Sharehouse, and introduced SOS to their client, United Airlines, who was interested in a project-based giving opportunity.

"We're always ready to use our construction skillset and connections to bolster the efforts of nonprofits," says Fiegel, who reports that United recently packed 500+ newborn kits for SOS.

Through various fundraisers, Fiegel says the foundation was able to provide SOS a $10,000 donation by year's end. "I am always so impressed by the generosity of our people, but it was especially sweet to see our field workers walking up with diapers and wipes!"

Fiegel says the foundation will continue its advocacy for SOS. "Whether you've been in the same situation or lucky enough to never have experienced need, we can all understand how hard it is to get a step up sometimes without a little hand up."

The foundation was able to provide Share Our Spare a $10,000 donation by year's end.

ANDREA BOCK

When Andrea Bock saw the post from Share Our Spare (SOS) about needing volunteers to sort and make clothing kits at home, a light went on. "This was during the pandemic when I was feeling less than productive," she says. A former teacher who paused from teaching to raise her twins, Bock had returned as a substitute when COVID-19 hit. "I knew I could do this project safely from home, and I knew how important these items are to struggling families, so I was all in."

Growing up on the Northwest Side of Chicago, Bock remembers seeing the line for food distribution at her neighborhood church stretch around the block. "Unfortunately, it's something you still see today, as it becomes harder and harder for families to keep up with the cost of living," she says. "I LOVE that SOS is there with diapers and formula and all of the essential things that are simply out of reach for too many people."

Her initial volunteer project left an impression - "I just kept imagining the parents when they opened the kits of pants, shoes and shirts for their children," she says - and it eventually led to a weekly trip to the Sharehouse to help wherever needed. "There's always something to be done and you leave feeling like you've really accomplished something."

Bock says she especially loves that used items are put to work again through SOS and regularly brings baby gear from her friends when they're done using them. "There's so much life left in them, and if they're not good enough quality, they're recycled. Nothing is wasted."

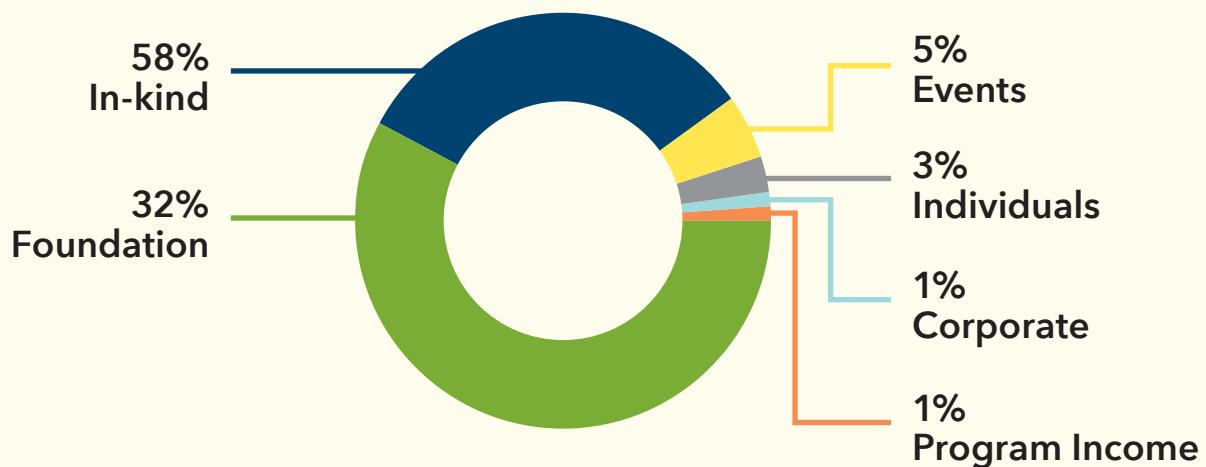

Her mom and kids have joined her at the Sharehouse and even sorted kits for her birthday. "The staff is welcoming and it feels like a community with a shared purpose," says Bock. "If you have a little time to volunteer, it's so worth it."

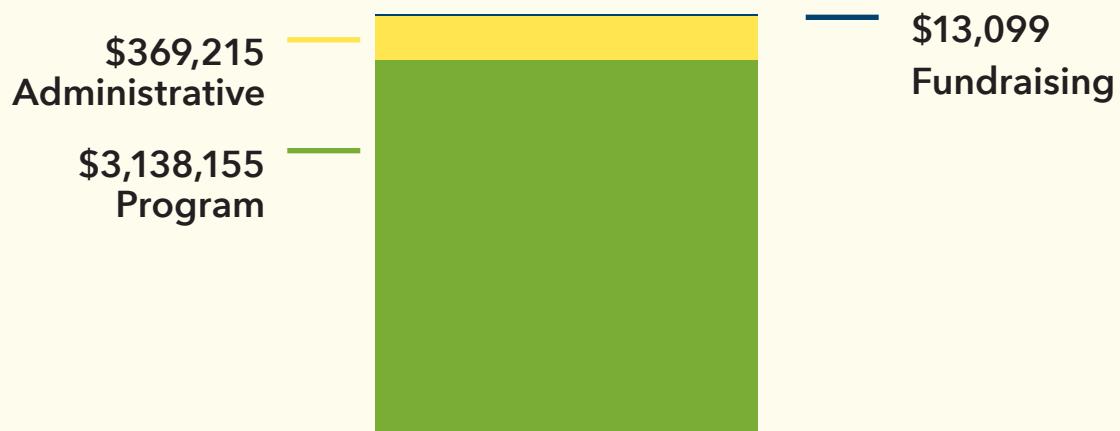

"I love that Share Our Spare is there with diapers and formula and all of the essential things that are simply out of reach for too many people."
